2020

Geospatial Intelligence Hall of Fame

Unfortunately, due to the COVID-19 pandemic, no in-person AMS events were held in 2020. As the pandemic is continuing, the 2021 St. Patrick's Dayevent will also not be held. The AMS Board estimates the earliest in-person events can safely be held in 2021 is likely late Summer or beyond. So, (drumroll please) we are trying something new with a virtual Valentine's Day Gathering to help us try "Keeping in Touch and Having Fun" online.

On February 3 an invitation was sent to all members via your email address. The email contains the link to the "Zoom gathering" scheduled on Thursday, February 18, 2021 at 2:00 PM. Wear something red and tell the participants how you celebrated Valentine's Day during COVID-19. It will be good to see each other on your monitor!! If you did not receive the email stated above, send an email to mappingseniors@outlook.com requesting the link and the link will be sent directly to you.

To start the Zoom process, click on the link in the e-mail and follow the prompts that appear on your computer, tablet or smart phone. It will likely ask you to load the Zoom software. Be patient as it can take a few seconds for some steps to complete. Make sure to "join with video" and that your speakers are on and microphone muted (except when you want to speak).

The Board will monitor the status of the pandemic throughout the year. Stay tuned for information on all events, Zoom-based or (eventually) in-person, via the AMS email, website, Facebook and/or Newsletter channels.

From the NGA Press Release -- The National Geospatial-Intelligence Agency selected six new members for induction into the Geospatial Intelligence Hall of Fame on January 14, 2021 in Springfield, VA.

"This is a group of truly remarkable individuals who all had significant impacts on shaping the GEOINT community into what it is today," said NGA Director Vice Adm. Robert Sharp. "Every one of them had exemplary leadership and technical roles throughout their careers and helped usher in advancements and technology in geospatial intelligence and analysis."

Established in 2001, NGA's Geospatial Intelligence Hall of Fame honors and inducts members each year to recognize those who have profoundly affected the geospatial intelligence tradecraft.

This year's selectees are: Barry M. Barlow, Louis A. Bauer (posthumously), Stacy L. Bardner, John (Jack) H. Hild, James E. Johnson, and Paula Webb Roberts.

AMS PRESIDENT’S MESSAGE

Many websites include consumer reviews and comments about their products or services. Over the holidays I saw a mug for sale on Etsy with a “review” of the year 2020. On it, 2020 received a “One out of five stars” rating with a comment “Would not recommend.”

Another mug also rated 2020 “One star,” commenting that 2020 was of “Very poor quality. Not what I was expecting.” I suspect we all felt this way at least once during the past year.

For AMS, 2020 was a bust in terms of physically getting together as in years past. And yet people showed the resilience and adaptability that keeps our nation strong. Most of us likely never heard of Zoom before the pandemic arrived, unless it was Mazda’s “zoom, zoom” commercials. Now, Zoom and other online capabilities help us safely keep in touch, celebrate birthdays and holidays, conduct business, take classes and stay informed. Past President, Amber Beall, moved the AMS Board to Zoom based meetings early in the year. She reached out to members and the Board to make decisions on the scheduled events, taking into account the growing impact of COVID-19. So, a big “thank you” to Amber for her leadership as President through the ever-changing landscapes of 2019-2020! While President, Amber also served as, and still is, the AMS Newsletter Managing Editor. In recognition of her dedicated service, Amber is awarded the AMS President’s Award for 2021. The AMS Executive Board also presented her with a dinner gift certificate for two to the Myrtle Beach Culinary Institute. Thanks again Amber!

2021 has started off in an extraordinary fashion of its own. By the time you read this in February over a month will have passed. I hope and pray that our nation, and the world, are firmly on a better path by then. Take care of each other. Be safe. Look for information from the AMS Board as we explore how to accomplish “Having fun and keeping in touch” in 2021.
