Tribute to Paul Hayduk

Many AMS members are sad to learn of the recent death of Paul Hayduk on January 13, 2023. Paul served as the Vice President in 1996 and then as President in 1997. Paul continued serving on the AMS Board as an active participant providing valued suggestions, comments, as well as a voice for future endeavors. Paul was valued as a reviewer of the AMS News prior to publication. Paul and his wife Susan attended almost all AMS scheduled events and gatherings. Paul enjoyed talking with colleagues and guests as well as welcoming new members to the association. Paul’s smile and warm personality will be greatly missed. The Board and members extends sympathy to his wife Susan and the Hayduk families. Paul’s remembrance is on page 8 and on the website at www.mappers.org/remembrance

Aging is like owning a classic car. In order to keep looking beautiful, you’ll need more than a few tune-ups and a fresh coat of paint.

Yes, the holidays are a wonderful time of the year and are over for 2022! The 2022 Holiday Lunch Gala was again held at Dutch’s Daughter in Frederick, MD on December 7. It was enjoyable listening to the chatter and laughter as folks arrived during the meet and greet prior to the luncheon. Folks were caught hugging one another while enjoying seeing each other.

As usual members did not disappoint the Frederick County Salvation Army Angel Tree Program with donating unwrapped toys, games, balls, and many other gifts for the children in Frederick County.

Following the luncheon, Lon Hamann presided over the AMS Annual Meeting. Although the main purpose of the meeting is the election of the 2023 Vice-President and Treasurer, Lon recognized the current AMS Board, asked all postage contributors and volunteers who assist with passing out name tags, selling 50/50 tickets, photographing the events and in any other way volunteering for the organization to stand and be recognized. Stereophotogrammetry, involves estimating the three-dimensional coordinates of points on an object employing measurements made in two or more photographic images taken from different positions.

Stereoscopy is the production of the illusion of depth in a photograph, movie, or other two-dimensional image by the presentation of a slightly different image to each eye. The two images are then combined in the brain to give the perception of depth.

Stereoscopy is used in photogrammetry and also for entertainment through the production of stereograms.

Avoiding Scam and Fraud for Older Adults

Contents are excerpts from National Council on Aging (NCOA) view the entire information on all of the scams at - <https://www.ncoa.org/article/top-5-financial-scams-targeting-older-adults>

Why do financial scammers target seniors?

Fraudsters and con artists tend to go after older adults because they believe this population has plenty of money in the bank. But it's not just wealthy older Americans who are targeted. Older adults with low income are also at risk for fraud.

Financial scams often go unreported or can be tough to prosecute, so they're viewed as a “low-risk” crime. However, they're devastating to many older adults and can leave them in a vulnerable position, with limited ability to recover their losses.

1. Government impersonation scams

In government impersonation scams (also known as government imposter scams), scammers call unsuspecting older adults and pretend to be from the Internal Revenue Service (IRS), Social Security Administration, or Medicare. They may say the victim has unpaid taxes and threaten arrest or deportation if they don't pay up immediately. Or they may say Social Security or Medicare benefits will be cut off if the victim doesn't provide personal identifying information. This information can then be used to commit identity theft.

Government imposters may demand specific forms of payment, such as a prepaid debit card, cash, or wire transfer. Using special technology, they often “spoof” the actual phone number of a government agency or call from the same zip code (202 for Washington, D.C., for example). This can trick some people into thinking the caller is from a valid source.

2. Sweepstakes and lottery scams

The sweepstakes scam is one many people are familiar with. Here, scammers call an older adult to tell them they've won a lottery or prize of some kind. If they want to claim their winnings, the older adult must send money, cash, or gift cards up front—sometimes thousands of dollars' worth—to cover supposed taxes and processing fees.

3. Robocalls and phone scams

One common robocall is the “Can you hear me?” call. When the older person says “yes,” the scammer records their voice and hangs up.

Robocalls take advantage of sophisticated, automated phone technology to dial large numbers of households from anywhere in the world. While there are legal uses for this technology, robocalls can also be used to carry out a variety of scams on trusting older adults who answer the phone. Some robocalls may claim that a warranty is expiring on the victim's car or electronic device, and payment is needed to renew it. Like with government impersonation calls, scammers often spoof the number from which they're calling to make it appear as if the call is from a reputed organization.

4. Computer tech support scams

Technical support scams prey on older people's lack of knowledge about computers and cybersecurity. A pop-up message or blank screen usually appears on a computer or phone, telling the victim their device is damaged and needs fixing. When they call the support number for help, the scammer may either request remote access to the older person's computer and/or demand they pay a fee to have it repaired.

5. The grandparent scam

The grandparent scam is so simple and so devious because it uses one of older adults' most reliable assets, their hearts. Scammers call a would-be grandparent and say something along the lines of: “Hi, Grandma, do you know who this is?” When the unaware grandparent guesses the name of the grandchild the scammer most sounds like, the scammer is able to instantly secure their trust. The fake grandchild then asks for money to solve some urgent financial problem (such as overdue rent, car repairs, or jail bond). They may beg the grandparent not to tell anyone. Since fraudsters often ask to be paid via gift cards or money transfer, which don't always require identification to collect, the older adult may have no way of ever recovering their money.

Other popular scams targeting older adults

- Romance scams
- COVID-19 scams
- Investment scams
- Medicare and health insurance scams
- Internet and email fraud

What to do if you think you've been the victim of a scam

Scams are specially designed to catch us off guard, and they can happen to anyone. There's nothing to be ashamed of if you think you're a victim. Keep handy the phone numbers of resources that can help, including the local police, your bank (if money has been taken from your accounts), and Adult Protective Services. To obtain the contact information for Adult Protective Services in your area, call the Eldercare Locator, a government sponsored national resource line, at: 1-800-677-1116, or visit their website.

You can also report scams online to the FTC. Sharing your experience can help prevent it from happening to another older adult.
